

February 2016

boutique.

BUSINESS SENSE FOR FASHION RETAILERS

ISSUE 64

IN BLACK AND WHITE

New collections showcase
Working with fashion bloggers
Inside Artichoke boutique
Nikki De Marchi on swimwear

Scoop London prepares to unveil second edition

The second edition of Scoop London is set to open its doors at The Saatchi Gallery from 21-23 February. The event, which attracted visitors from Italy, France and Japan during its inaugural edition in September, takes place during London Fashion Week showcasing fresh talent, high-end brands and international designers. This season buyers can expect to see collections from the likes of US designer Erin Fetherston, Parmian labels Nach Bijoux and Babachon as well as shoe collections from Lucy, Choo and Ming Ray.

Eco-friendly bag brand Matt and Nat moves into footwear with new shoe collection launch

Luxury eco accessories label Matt and Nat is launching its first footwear line for SS16. The collection features the same vegan materials used for its bags, with key styles including faux leather open toe flat sandals and boyish brogues. Since launching in Montreal in 1995, the brand has recycled over two million plastic bottles in the manufacture of its bags. Moreover, it has seen its designs worn by the likes of Natalie Portman and Fergie Cotton.

Heidi Klein unveils refurbished boutique inspired by a beach house in the Hamptons

Luxury swimwear label Heidi Klein has refurbished its flagship Chelsea boutique in the style of a Hamptons beach house. The new space boasts whitewashed wooden panels and fresh palm leaves as well as a delicate scent of coconut. Its interior was created by renowned design agency Kinnerseely Kent and took six months to complete.

Creative Director and co-founder Heidi Gosman comments: "We are beyond thrilled with the new look of our flagship Chelsea boutique. London shoppers can now stop by and feel completely transported to a fresh, elegant and truly luxurious holiday environment."

